

The succession of Angela Merkel

Angela Merkel's departure:

Angela Merkel announced as early as 2018 that she would not serve a fifth term to be chancellor. She will have remained at the head of her country for 16 years and rubbed shoulders with four French presidents: Jacques Chirac, Nicolas Sarkozy, François Hollande, and Emmanuel Macron.

Angela Merkel Successor:

First, Annegret Kramp-Karrenbauer, the one chosen by Angela Merkel to take over. Annalena Baerbock, was the phenomenon of the start of the campaign, but she made some mistakes. Her candidacy was plagued by a plagiarism scandal in one of her books, inaccuracies in her CV, a bonus of 25 000 euros, that was not declared. After the Annegret Kramp- Karrenbauer failure, it was Armin Laschet who emerged victorious in the internal struggle for the head of the CDU which Angela Merkel hoped to avoid.
